12. Consultations

12.1 Who was consulted

JPMorgan consulted with employees who self-identified as persons with disabilities, members of the Diversity and Inclusion Committee, and members of AccessAbility, an internal Business Resource Group that serves as a resource on disability issues, a voice for employees with disabilities, and a partner in the success of all JPMorgan Chase colleagues. The mission of AccessAbility is to complement JPMorgan Chase's global diversity efforts by maximizing the contributions of employees affected by disabilities, long-term illness or caregiving responsibilities. The Canada Management Committee was also consulted in the finalizing of this Plan.

The employees who participated in the consultations identified as persons with chronic medical and mental health conditions, physical disabilities, neurodivergent conditions, learning disabilities, and allies.

12.2 Consultation topics

The purpose of the consultations was to better understand the experience of employees with disabilities and where they may encounter barriers to a fulsome employee experience at JPMorgan Chase. Employees who had previously participated in consultation were asked to opine on any changes they had noticed since the prior consultation period. Questions were asked about experiences pertaining to the employment cycle (recruiting, onboarding, training and development, promotion, retention) employee resources (i.e. communication and accommodation), barriers to inclusion and success at JPMorgan, and opportunities for improvements.

The responses provided generated dialogue, greater awareness about systemic and physical barriers, and suggestions on ways to address these barriers. The feedback is summarized in this review and will be used to inform future enhancements to our policies, procedures, communication, training and physical environment.

12.3 Consultation timing

JPMorgan consulted with the Access Ability Business Resource Group and individual employees who self identified as persons with disabilities during the 2024-2025 progress report period.

12.4 Consultation methods

JPMorgan met with employees virtually to conduct the consultations. The virtual consultations via Zoom technology were most used to include employees across the country and those working remotely. The consultation was completed virtually due to the meeting cadence with the AccessAbility Business Resource Group, and individual discussions with the employees who self-identified as persons with disabilities to ensure confidentiality.

12.5 Consultation results

The results from the consultations yielded feedback in the following areas:

12.5.1 Physical barriers

Barriers to accessibility for persons with disabilities in the physical spaces of the sites was raised. The access doors and doors to the washrooms are not barrier-free at some sites. Consultation with the property managers at each of the 6 sites across Canada confirmed that access to washrooms do meet the accessibility code guidelines, however only 1 site would be considered barrier free. At this time the property managers do not have plans to update the washroom doors at the other 5 sites. JPMorgan will continue discussions with the property managers and consider the need for barrier free upgrades when sourcing new sites or renovating the current sites.

12.5.2 Accommodation barriers

JPMorgan is transitioning from a hybrid work model to full-time in office attendance effective 2025. Employees noted that there is an opportunity for greater awareness regarding medical accommodation options as employees return to the office full-time.

There were some opportunities identified in the area of accommodations.

- Accommodation request reviews, particularly when medical conditions have not changed (i.e. chronic conditions) could be streamlined with less need to provide information that is repetitive.
- Employees also indicated a more fluid process upon return from leave of absence would be supportive of re-entry.
- Concerns were raised about sufficient accessible and the adequacy of fridge space at the office as well as parking due to increased in-office attendance.
- Options for accommodations for short term medical conditions are not clearly understood (i.e. recovering from surgery).

How managers interact with employees with disabilities continues to be an opportunity. Employees expressed their intent to disclose their disability was highly dependent on the relationship with their manager, and some had not done so due to concerns on how the information would impact perception.

12.5.3 Manager and employee Training

Employees had positive feedback about the web-based accessibility training that was introduced in 2024. They also shared a desire for more manager and employee training, particularly in the areas of invisible disabilities and neurodivergent conditions.

12.5.4 Communication

Employees consulted who had accessed internal resources (i.e. benefits, disability leave, accommodation) were aware of the supports available for persons with disabilities at JPMorgan. Assistive technology supports (i.e. headsets, close captioning for Zoom calls) were appreciated by employees, allowing greater access to content and ability to participate in online forums.

JPMorgan included content on benefits, employee assistance, accommodation and inclusion during town hall meetings and in written communications to increase awareness and promote support programs. For 2024-2025 increased coverage for mental health practitioners was noted and appreciated by employees consulted. Vaccination coverage and paramedical services were also viewed favourably.

12.5.5 Recruiting

Employees shared feedback on their experience, with some expressing they had experienced anxiety during the recruitment process due to delays between verbal offers and official offer letters, particularly affecting those with ADHD. The onboarding process was also described as feeling decentralized, with orientation occurring a month later, leading to difficulties in finding information. JPMorgan continues to work with the Access Ability and the Recruiting team to identify local organizations to develop partnerships and support recruitment of persons with disabilities. Lastly, JPMorgan will share the work done internally in support of persons with disabilities through social media to create greater awareness of the firm's commitment to being an inclusive employer of choice.

13. Training

JPMorgan Chase aims provides training to all employees and volunteers on providing accessible customer service and how to interact with people with various types of disabilities.

- In addition to training on the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act (AODA) provided to provincially regulated employees, JPMorgan launched mandatory Accessibility training for all employees in Canada and non-Canadian employees and managers who support employees in Canada.
- JP Morgan Chase will continue to maintain a record of the training provided
